What is Daycroft?

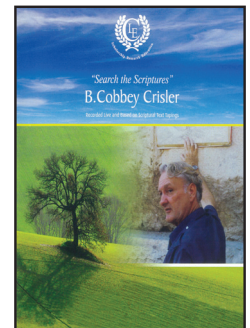

The Daycroft School Foundation promotes education based on moral and spiritual law. Daycroft makes grants to organizations serving Christian Science youth, provides individualized educational solutions through online learning, and partners with other organizations to further spiritually-based education. The Foundation's interests and priorities began with the work of The Daycroft School, which educated young Christian Scientists from 1928 - 1991.

Charlie Carr speaking at a commencement ceremony at Daycroft

spoke four times at Daycroft School. Her talk at Daycroft's 1986 commencement titled "The Ten Commandments" continues to engage listeners and has been particularly helpful to Sunday School teachers. Her other talks address issues of morality, answer questions about Christian Science, and include beautiful examples of healing.

Talks from Daycroft's Educator Conferences

The Daycroft School Foundation organized several conferences for Christian Scientists who are educators. Many excellent talks were given at these gatherings, and several of them were recorded. If you are interested in a spiritual standard for education or if you simply love young people, you will find these talks engaging and helpful.

After graduating from Harvard, serving in the Air Force, and establishing a career in business, Cobbey Crisler served as President of Daycroft School, his alma mater, from 1966 to 1976. It was during his time at Daycroft that he began a deep study of the Bible, including learning ancient Hebrew and Greek. His goal was to teach the Scriptures to Daycroft students, though as his interest in the Bible grew, so did the scope of his calling. He did research in biblical archaeology, co-authored two books, led numerous trips to the Holy Land with his wife Janet, and gave talks and seminars around the world. Most of Cobbey's talks were recorded, and Daycroft is pleased to make the CD's available. The list of 25 talks begins with the well-known "The Walk to Emmaus" and continues with such titles as "After the Master, What? The Book of Acts" and "A Visit With the Beloved Disciple: Gospel of John."
